SGA Senate opens the door for new blood

Applications are due on Wednesday

CLIFTON HUMMEL-YOUNG
Contributing Writer

Fifty-two SGA Senate seats are up for grabs starting today, when students may start declaring candidacy. The deadline for returning petition packets and declaring candidacy is Wednesday.

According to President Pro Tempore Evan Rosenberg, a legal studies major, a student must meet certain eligibility requirements before declaring themselves a candidate. "You have to have the proper GPA [2.5], you can't have any holds on your record, financial or conduct-wise," he said. The eligibility guidelines follow the Golden Rule, a set of conduct codes that can be found on the UCF Web site.

Petition packets can be picked up in Student Union Room 218. They contain forms for candidates to collect a certain number of signatures from students in their college. The signatures must belong to students who also meet eligibility requirements.

The number of signatures required depends on your major, according to Brent Fieser, a finance major who heads the SGA Elections Committee.

An undeclared student must collect 25 signatures from other undeclared students. Students enrolled in any of the colleges on campus, such as Arts and Sciences or Health and Human Affairs, must collect 50 signatures from students in the same college.

Once the necessary signatures are collected, petition packets should be returned to the Senate

Secretary, who can be found in the SGA office in the Student Union, Fieser said. The last opportunity to declare candidacy is 5 p.m. Wednesday.

"Declaration of candidacy is basically where the student, after they fill out their petition, declare an actual seat," Fieser said. Each college is assigned a certain number of seats in the Senate, and can-

Running for office?

To be a senate candidate, you must:

- Have at least a 2.5 GPA with no financial or conduct-based holds.
- Pick up a petition from Room 218 in the Student Union.
- Collect signatures from students enrolled in your college.
- Turn form into SGA office by 5 p.m. Wednesday.

Freshmen storm field

The first Knights home football game drew the largest home crowd since 2000 with 32,224 fans, as UCF took on West Virginia. Among them was a group participating in Freshman Frenzy, a program put on by UCF Sports Marketing and the UCF Athletics Association.

The program is designed to group freshmen and transport them by charter bus to the game where they would tailgate and sit in a group to watch the first half. Then the freshmen go down to the field and make a human tunnel and greet the players as they come out onto the field after halftime — all for $30.

The goal was to get freshmen motivated to join UCF activities and have fun. But many of those who took part had mixed reviews.

"I had a great time," 18-year-old Jessica Kattah said. "It was fun to meet a lot of people and sit and watch the game. We ended up just going back on the bus after the third quarter because it wasn't fun anymore since we were losing so bad. But it was worth the money. The food was all right, and my friends and I had a good time. I am ready to go to more games."

Fans decked themselves out in black and gold for the home season opener on Saturday. Despite UCF losing to the No. 10-ranked team in the nation, spirits were high, as was attendance with more than 32,000 fans in the stands.

Rowdy Knights rile the stands with taunts and cheers

JORDON CRUDO
Staff Writer

The third anniversary of the Sept. 11 tragedies was the theme of Saturday's football game, the first home game of the season for UCF, where the Knights lost 45-20.

Pre-game festivities could be seen around the Citrus Bowl, as several radio stations and restaurants took over Tinker Field. Fans won prizes and participated in pre-game parties and activities, but the real fun that day was in the stands Saturday.

As soon as the Citrus Bowl opened its gates, fans poured in, including members of the Rowdy Knights club, who were poised at the front entrance until they were allowed to enter.

"We always have a club tailgate, then go to 'Knight-March' to see the players go into the stadium," Rowdy

Knights President Adrian Moore said. "Then [we] get into the Citrus Bowl as soon as it opens so we can get our seats and start heckling the opposing players who are on the field," the 22-year-old civil engineering major added.

"We've been together a little over four years," he said. The group attends as many sports as possible, with a focus on men's basketball, baseball, football and volleyball with the main goal of pumping up the UCF players and trying to unnerve the opposition.

"We always make it to football. I am one of the original three founders of the club, and we support our Knights in any way possible," Moore said. Last year, the group would take buses to the away games just to be able to sit through a Knights game.

Ivan not a threat

Storm veers away from Central Florida

CHRISTINE DELLERT
Associate Editor

Still recovering from the wind and rain of hurricanes Charley and Frances, Orlando residents should be happy to hear that Ivan won't be another unwelcome guest.

A Category 4 storm yesterday afternoon Hurricane Ivan is expected to eventually make landfall along Florida's panhandle on Wednesday. But forecasters say there is still much room for error.

Ivan is also expected to strengthen again to a Category 5 — with winds of more than 155 mph — when it enters the Gulf of Mexico tonight. It would be the first Category 5 storm to make landfall in the Caribbean in more than 20 years. Forecasters were predicting on Sunday afternoon that the storm would swirl into Florida, Mississippi, Alabama or Louisiana as a Category 3.

"I feel bad for the other people," 21-year-old Alison Smith, a psychology major, said. "But I'm relieved that we aren't going to have to go through everything for the third time."

Because Ivan shouldn't have any direct impact on Orlando, UCF officials have not announced that they will cancel classes this week. But, that wasn't the case about 10 days ago when campus was closed for three days because of Frances' fury.

Over the Labor Day weekend, UCF opened its doors to area residents and students taking shelter from Frances. About 1,000 people evacuated to the UCF Arena and three other campus buildings to weather the storm.

Absent push from Bush, ban on assault guns will end today

STEVEN SOTLOFF
Staff Writer

The ban on assault weapons expires today, a move Democrats are expected to use as ammunition to boost their chances in the November election.

President George W. Bush is not expected to renew the ban, which he said he supported when he took office four years ago. His father, former President George H.W. Bush, supported banning the importing of 43 semi-automatic assault rifles in 1989.

Most recently signed in 1994 by former President Clinton, the ban set to expire prohibits 19 types of military-style assault weapons and an assortment of accessory combinations. The ban is supposed to be up for review and extension every 10 years.

The measure was introduced to lower violent crime. But many gun supporters believe this has not happened as a result of the ban.

The number of victims of violent crime is down, falling from about 55,000 in 1994 to more than 20,000 in 2003, according to the National Crime Victimization Survey from the Bureau of Justice Statistics. Violent crimes included in the survey were rape, robbery, assault and homicide. The crime rate in 2002 was at the lowest level ever recorded. Violent crimes declined by .9 percent, or 13,155, from incidents between 2001 and 2002, according to the Uniform Crime

News and notices for the UCF community

Rec classes open

The Recreation and Wellness Center, shut down by damage from Hurricane Charley, has relocated its fitness and cardio equipment to the Pegasus Landing Fitness Rooms, where the equipment is available for use starting today.

Group exercise is now in the Like Oak Room, and spinning classes are in the Garden Room. Both rooms are next to the Student Resource Center. Exercise class schedules will vary, so check the Web site at <http://rec.ucf.edu> for more information.

Intramural basketball will begin Sept. 20 in the College of Education gymnasium and the outside courts.

The UCF Wellness Center is now in Osceola Hall, Building 110. Call 407-823-5841 for more information.

Dance, dance revolution

The UCF Dance Marathon, which supports the Children's Miracle Network of children's hospitals through fund-raising events that conclude with a 24-hour dance marathon each spring, will host preliminary events this week, starting with a meet-and-greet session between noon and 3 p.m. today in the Key West Ballroom in the Student Union.

For more information, check out the Web site at <http://www.ucfdm.com> or e-mail CABDM@mail.ucf.edu.

UCF Dance Marathon Morale applications also are out. Morale volunteers motivate marathon participants to get involved and stay awake and on their feet throughout the dance event, which takes place March 5-6, 2005.

Interested students can pick up an application in the Office of Student Involvement, Student Union Room 208. Applications are due back by 5 p.m. Sept. 24. E-mail Morale Director Alicia Bandy with questions at AGBandy83@yahoo.com.

Hamming it up

UCF Amateur Radio Club is looking for members who are interested in volunteer work, emergency communication and hands-on applications.

The club meets at 6 p.m. Wednesdays in Engineering I Room 368. E-mail Jami Ward at kg4zke@gmail.com for more information.

Rugby and guts

Men's and women's rugby teams are recruiting for the fall.

No experience is required. Practices are held Tuesdays and Thursdays between 4 p.m. and 6 p.m. on the practice football fields behind the Academic Village.

For more information, visit <http://www.ucfrugby.com> for the men's team and <http://pegasus.cc.ucf.edu/~wru> for the women's team.

Assault guns include those with modifications

FROM A1

Report issued by the FBI.

According to the National Rifle Association, not allowing so-called assault weapons is ridiculous because the term is defined as a gun having "more than one cosmetic accessory," NRA Executive Vice President Wayne Lapiere said in an interview last week with MSNBC. "On Tuesday, there will not be one gun available that is a machine gun."

The group had accused the ban of violating the Second Amendment. This amendment allows people the right to bear arms.

Many gun supporters claim the firearms are for hunting and sport, but including accessories arguably offers no value to the shooter. Some of the weapons prohibited include the Uzi, SLG-95, Hi-Point Carbine and the AR-15.

A rifle is considered an assault weapon if it has a detachable magazine and two or more of the following features: folding or telescoping stock, threaded barrel, grenade launcher or a pistol grip protruding conspicuously beneath the stock. Magazines holding more than 10 rounds are considered "high capacity" magazines and are also not allowed.

Jose Ferrer of Reig's Gun Shop and Shooting, 5512 S. Orange Blossom Trail, said: "We're absolutely going to sell them [if the ban expires.] The ban changes the way [the gun] looks, not the way it operates."

The weekend shop clerk added: "It was a feel-good legislation. It's not the guns, it's the people that have them. If you put those people in jail, you won't have a problem."

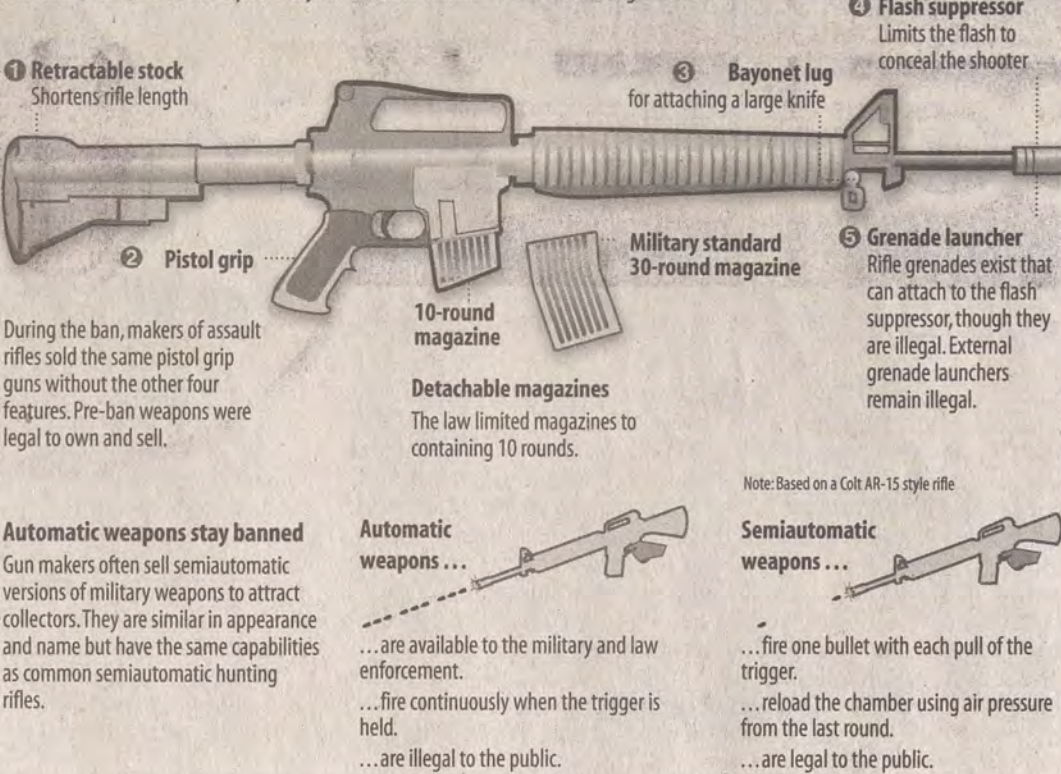

Several UCF students don't agree.

"It's definitely not a good thing, and it makes me nervous," said junior Candice Huggins, a business management major.

"[The assault weapons] should be controlled," said Sean Grawunde, 21 and an

Gun ban expires, legalizes making of military-style features

A law banning the manufacture of semiautomatic assault weapons expires today. The law defined an assault weapon as any semiautomatic rifle with a detachable magazine.

aerospace engineering major. "If they put [the ban] in 10 years ago, they put it in for a reason, and I think it should stay. If I start seeing these guns sold at Wal-Mart, I'm going to start worrying."

In fact, Wal-Mart employees on SR 50 said they would not sell the assault weapons even if the ban expires. They still sell sporting rifles and pellet and BB guns.

Recently, Democratic presidential nominee, Sen. John Kerry, has been the topic of controversy after accepting a Remington 11-87 shotgun during his Labor Day stop in Racine, W. Va. Kerry is co-sponsoring a bill that would supplement the current ban.

The Assault Weapons Ban and Law Enforcement Protection Act of 2003 (S. 1431) would actually ban the semiautomatic shotgun he accepted as a gift from a labor union representative.

"Kerry tells union workers that he's a hunter, but the truth is he would ban their shotguns," according to a press release from Lawrence G. Keane, senior vice president and general counsel of the National Shooting Sports Foundation (NSSF).

Nevertheless, Kerry stands firm on his opposition to legalizing these weapons and said in a news release that his acceptance of the gift does not compromise his position.

"The NRA put the squeeze on George Bush and they're spending tens of millions of dollars to support his campaign," Kerry said in a statement on his Web site. "So now, the president is saying with a wink and a smile that he'll extend the assault weapons ban if Congress sends it to him. And Congress says they'll send it to him if he asks for it."

Kerry said he believes that legalizing assault weapons makes it easier for al-Qaeda and other terrorist organizations to acquire them in the United States. Coalition forces in Afghanistan found al-Qaeda training manuals that specifically urged terrorists to obtain assault weapons in the United States.

Felons are forbidden from possessing firearms, which is better enforced since the passing of the Brady Handgun Violence Prevention Act. This act was adopted in 1993 as an amendment to the Gun Control Act of 1968 and imposes a waiting period of up to five days for the purchase of a handgun. The Brady Act also subjects gun buyers to a background check.

But according to a recent study at the University of Pennsylvania titled "An Updated Assessment of the Federal Assault Weapons Ban: Impact on Gun Markets and Gun Violence, 1994-2003," these weapons are "being sold in undocumented, second-hand markets." Also, "banned guns and magazines contributed to up to a quarter of gun crimes prior to the ban."

attempting to walk a straight line.

The tests, performed in front of the squad car, were taped on the officer's in-car video system.

Lupo arrested Sparkman for driving under the influence. She was taken to the Orange County DUI Testing Center where she refused to submit to a breath test.

Sparkman claimed she was driving because her friend was too drunk after spending the evening at local bar Trick Shots.

She needs a better hiding place

An 18-year-old woman tried to hide a cup filled with Bacardi rum in between two parked cars when she saw a police officer approaching.

Officer Paul White stopped Erin Roche of Fort Myers at 11:55 p.m. on Aug. 20 when he saw her walking with an open container in between Lake Claire Apartments Building 70 on UCF's campus and the back Lake Claire parking lot on Gemini Boulevard North.

White told Roche to get the cup she had placed on the ground between two parked cars.

He could smell the alcohol emitting from it, according to his report.

When asked how old she was, Roche said she was 18 and then produced an ID that confirmed this.

Roche was charged with underage possession of alcohol. Officer White took a sample of the beverage as evidence.

Future among best in nation

The Future was named one of the top three college newspapers in the country on Saturday in a contest sponsored by the Society of Professional Journalists.

"It's great to see a year's worth of good work recognized. We have a great team here — and a great paper to show for it," former Managing Editor Alex Babcock said.

During the annual Mark of Excellence awards, the society applauds student journalism around the nation in more than 40 categories. The Future's highest honor was being selected as one of the three finalists in the "Best All-Around Non-Daily Newspaper." Out of the papers that run two or three times each week, the Future was bested by only George Washington University's The GW Hatchet.

"It's really nice to stay consistent with the constantly expanding newspaper and improved content," Heissam Jebailey, the publisher, said.

Defense minister says Russia and United States see eye-to-eye

MOSCOW — Russia's Defense Minister Sergei Ivanov said yesterday that Moscow and Washington speak a common language on fighting terror and defended Russia's right to deal pre-emptive strikes on terrorist bases abroad in the wake of the school hostage seizure.

Ivanov said he had spoken twice with U.S. Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld last week, adding that the U.S. administration was more receptive to Moscow's arguments than some European officials.

After the school hostage crisis ended Sept. 3 in a chaos of gunfire and explosions that killed at least 330 hostages, President Vladimir Putin blamed it on international terrorism. Putin lashed out angrily at those in the West who continued to advise Russia to conduct peace talks with rebels in Chechnya, advising them to negotiate with Osama bin Laden.

Report: Huge explosion seen in North Korean province

SEOUL, South Korea — A large explosion occurred in the northern part of North Korea, sending a huge column of smoke into the air on the 56th anniversary of the communist regime, a South Korean news agency reported Sunday.

The South Korean government said it was trying to confirm the report of an explosion at 11 a.m. on Thursday in Yanggang province near the border with China.

The Yonhap news agency carried conflicting reports from unidentified sources, with one in Washington saying the incident could be related to a natural disaster such as a forest fire. It also cited a diplomatic source in Seoul as raising the possibility of an accident or a nuclear test.

What's in the news at colleges around the country

Group of teens attacks college students in Providence

PROVIDENCE, R.I. — A group of teenagers attacked five college students in broad daylight last week — kicking, punching and verbally taunting them in two separate assault incidents police sometimes call "wilding."

The college students suffered minor injuries. University and city police were investigating; no charges have been filed.

The incidents occurred blocks away from each other at around 3 p.m. Friday. Police were investigating if the attacks were connected.

Pennsylvania considers new community college

HARRISBURG, Pa. — Vocational school director Kevin O'Donnell sees central Pennsylvania's Juniata River Valley as a no-man's land for community college access.

O'Donnell's office in Lewistown is 65 miles from Harrisburg Area Community College — a commute of an hour or more. The next-closest, Pennsylvania Highlands Community College in Johnstown, is more than 100 miles away.

O'Donnell is among a local group of education, business and community leaders who are thinking about doing something that has not been done in Pennsylvania for a decade — opening a new community college. But the financial realities may be overwhelming.

Counties and school districts already face pressure to hold the line on property taxes in tight economic times, so they are loath to increase them to establish new community colleges.

Rhode Island College drops complaint against professor

PROVIDENCE, R.I. — Rhode Island College has dropped a discrimination complaint against a professor who refused to discipline two students who allegedly made racist remarks.

The discrimination complaint stems from an incident on Feb. 19, when two students with children in RIC's preschool allegedly made racist remarks regarding welfare benefits in conversation with a third student-mother.

The professor, Lisa Church, who was the coordinator for the cooperative preschool, wasn't present for the conversation, but the offended student complained to her and asked her to discipline the two others.

Church said she couldn't have done so without violating those students' free-speech rights. The offended student brought a complaint to school administrators.

Harvard student to go on trial in killing of teenager

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. — One was a struggling teenage father who worked as a cook. The other was a Harvard graduate student fluent in five languages. Their paths crossed just once, when the teenager stopped for a pizza and the Harvard student walked by his car.

Hours later, the teenager was dead and the Harvard student was charged in his killing. In a Cambridge courtroom next week Alexander Pring-Wilson, 26, goes on trial for murder in the death of Michael Colono, 18.

The killing last year seemed to worsen long-simmering tensions between working-class residents of Cambridge and students at the Ivy League school.

Colono's family believes Pring-Wilson's lawyers have emphasized the ethnic and economic differences between the two families to try to make Michael Colono look like the attacker.

Pring-Wilson's lawyers said local media played up class differences in a way that was unfair to their client. They tried unsuccessfully to move the trial to another city.

Jewish settlers protest planned withdrawal from Gaza strip

JERUSALEM — Tens of thousands of Jewish settlers and their backers demonstrated in Jerusalem on Sunday against Prime Minister Ariel Sharon's plan to evacuate all settlements from Gaza and four West Bank enclaves in a rally held against a backdrop of assassination threats and warnings of civil war.

The withdrawal plan has upset the Israeli political scene since it was announced last year, turning Sharon's backers into opponents and detractors into supporters. Skeptical Palestinians believe the whole plan is a trick to annex large parts of the West Bank to Israel.

Most of those filling Jerusalem to protest the proposed pullout were Orthodox Jews — many of them teenagers. A huge banner behind the stage set the theme: "Disengagement tears the people apart." Many waved blue and white Israeli flags.

Not expensive to run for office

didates must choose a specific seat in the declaration process. "You can only declare for one seat, but there isn't a difference between any of them," he said.

Fieser said he expects 150 to 200 students to run for the 52 available seats.

With such a wide gap between candidates and positions, as much as 4-1, one would expect the competition to be fierce — even nasty — like recent elections in the federal government. This is not so, according to Rosenberg. He said that while the campaigning can be intense, he does not recall many instances where matters degraded into name-calling and slander.

He also said that the intensity of competition is not the same for all of the colleges. "It really depends on the college," he explained. "Typically Arts and Sciences and Business are the two fiercest. You have multiple people running in each seat, and I find that those two seem to be the toughest ones. You find a lot of the political interest groups are in the College of Arts and Sciences, and they definitely like to get involved."

In contrast, Rosenberg also said that the Senate seats reserved for the Daytona Beach and Brevard campuses are often vacant or occupied by a student who ran unopposed.

In another departure from typical politics on the federal level, both Rosenberg and Fieser said that campaigns for the student Senate require little or no money to be spent.

"It doesn't take much," Rosenberg said. "I think last year I spent maybe $50, just because color photo copies are expensive. I could have gotten black and white copies, but I thought I'd spring for color."

Fieser said that there is no official cap on campaign spending. Candidates are free to invest as much money as they please.

In Rosenberg's opinion, to be involved in campus prior to running for office is key. Greek life, for example, might be an efficient way of getting your name out and garnering support, as many senators are Greek.

Another suggestion Rosenberg had for the Senate hopefuls was to speak to clubs and organizations they feel they can properly represent. "I went to clubs I felt I could affect and make an impact on, and hopefully cover some issues they're interested in, and get some supports from them," Rosenberg said.

Elections will be held from Sept. 27 until Sept. 29, with run-offs Oct. 4 through Oct. 6. Students can vote electronically on Polaris at <http://connect.ucf.edu>.

Change of course a relief

FROM A1

Frances damaged Smith's parents' house in Melbourne about a week earlier. "We had pretty moderate roof damage," she said. "We have to get half of the roof redone. All of our trees uprooted."

Now, Floridians are facing the threat of Ivan. Mandatory evacuation orders for tourists and 79,000 residents were in effect yesterday for the Florida Keys. The storm initially was projected to hit the Keys directly, but it unexpectedly wobbled and lurched west early Saturday.

Ivan already pummeled Grenada. The storm caused at least 39 deaths and destroyed 90 percent of the island's homes. It also knocked down a 17th-century stone prison, freeing criminals.

Then the storm smashed into Jamaica early Saturday with ferocious waves and winds nearing 155 mph. At least eleven were killed.

Yesterday, Ivan's eye passed about 35 miles south of Grand Cayman, capital of three Caribbean islands with 45,000 people. Hurricane-force winds extended 90 miles and tropical storm-force winds 175 miles.

Estimates of the damage had not been released yesterday afternoon.

While western Cuba is wading through Ivan's wrath today, UCF students are counting their blessings.

Charley struck UCF as a Category 1 storm on Aug. 13, before the fall semester started, ripping the roof off the Recreation and Wellness Center and knocking out electricity on Greek Row and in the Lake Claire Apartments.

Frances relocated the members of the Alpha Delta Pi sorority when the roof of their house caved in after the storm. Last week, the 33 women living in the house had to stay at a Hilton hotel.

About four inches of water from Frances flooded the Sigma Phi Epsilon fraternity house. Fourteen of Sig Ep's members were relocated to a Holiday Inn.

Throughout campus the aftermath of both storms is visible in the many fallen pine and oak trees.

Hurricane season ends Nov. 30. Until then, "we're just dealing with it as it comes," Smith said.

Yellow shirts a sign the 'jerks' are in the stands

FROM A1

Saturday's game proved the Rowdy Knights had earned their name, with members dressed in their traditional bright yellow shirts. Several members attended the game shirtless and painted their bodies.

"We have 123 dues-paying members," Moore said. "Only about 40 [came out] Saturday. Most of our freshmen were also in the Freshman Frenzy, so that kind of hurt our numbers."

But that did not stop the Rowdy Knights from performing their best and heckling West Virginia every moment until game time — except for the times they cheered on the Knights. Chants were altered to jab at the opposition, like "The Hey Song" being changed to "da-da-dada-dada, Hey, you suck! Hey West Virginia guess what, you suck!"

"For football we sit in section 118 in the front few rows, and during the game we make it a habit to stand the whole game," Moore said, giving credence to some shirts reading "Hey jerk, sit down," and "If you can't see ... STAND UP!"

"[We try to] be as loud as possible when UCF is on defense," Moore said. "Our other tradition is that we always do pushups on the fence in front of us with the cheerleaders when UCF scores."

As the game started, the Rowdy Knights were noticeably the loudest and most enthusiastic fans in attendance, as they screamed, "We want to make love to you, O'Leary!"

They also involved freshmen in the game, as the athletic marketing department sat the freshmen behind the Rowdy Knights.

As rowdy as they were, nothing got out of hand, unlike other instances around the stadium. Three separate brawls broke out in the stands before halftime.

The Rowdy Knights were the first to come and last to leave. To join the Rowdy Knights or view pictures of the fanfare from Saturday's game, visit their Web site at <http://www.pegasus.cc.ucf.edu/k/>.

Meeting with players and T-shirts cause frenzy

FROM A1

Others were not so happy. The main activity for the participants was going onto the field and greeting players. All of the freshmen were given white T-shirts, but were never told to hang on to them. When the time came, those who did not have their shirts were not allowed to participate in the on-field greet.

"I don't think the money was worth it really because of how they wouldn't let us on the field unless we had the Freshman Frenzy shirt, especially when they didn't mention we needed the shirt to get on the field," said Christopher Bruckart, an 18-year-old biology major.

"I feel like I wasted my money, actually, because of how unfair it was. They could have at least told us. Just the fact that 30 bucks went down the drain ruined the whole experience. I could have done everything I did for free. They should have given us a warning prior to the game, especially when they said we could leave our stuff on the buses," he said.

Keeping some freshmen off the field was not the only complaint. Some found the experience very unorganized. No water was distributed and the tailgate consisted of the freshmen sitting in the Tinker Field stands waiting for pizza, unable to participate in the pre-game activities on the field.

"We could really have gone anywhere if they would have told us we were just going to sit in one spot," Bruckart said.

"I also think water should have been provided along with the pizza and soda since it was so hot out, and there was no water for the game. I also really had wished they could have told us the timetable and told us where to go after the game," he added.

Another problem was the hurricane threat. Some freshmen were obligated to leave for the hurricane, none of whom were able to get a refund. Instead they were told they could pick up the complimentary shirt later.

"I know you couldn't get a refund at all," Bruckart said. "That was one thing they did tell us through the e-mails."

He added: "I had a lot of fun and I know they meant well. Hopefully, it can be better next year."

Candle in the wind

Silence isn't the most popular way to make a statement, but about 55 people participated in a candlelight vigil at the Reflecting Pond on Thursday night to mourn the 1,000 U.S. soldiers who have died in Iraq as of last Wednesday. Though the event was sponsored by Campus Peace Action on behalf of Moveon.org, "it wasn't policy and politics," Emily Ruff, an organizer, said. "Those 1,000 soldiers aren't able to even take in the beauty of the flame," Matt DeVlieger, a participant, said. The event, which was scheduled to last about 45 minutes, went on for almost three hours. "People just kept coming," Ruff said.

WVU RUN TOO MUCH FOR KNIGHTS

Alex Haynes posts career rushing numbers, despite UCF's sixth-straight loss

ASHLEY BURNS
Sports Editor

For the second consecutive week, UCF football fell victim to a high-powered running offense.

The Knights suffered a 45-20 defeat at the hands of No. 11 West Virginia Saturday. Despite giving up more than 230 yards on the ground, the Knights again took another huge step in the team's rebuilding process.

"We played a very good West Virginia team, but I think we improved in many areas," UCF Coach George O'Leary said. "I thought that the offensive line improved. We've got to improve in other areas as well, but the kids played the whole game. We had a few sloppy penalties and you can't have any of those and expect to beat a top-10 team like West Virginia."

Senior tailback Alex Haynes rushed for 137 yards on 34 carries against the Mountaineers, eclipsing WVU's top rusher Jason Colson, who rushed for 108 yards. Haynes moved into second place on UCF's all-time rushing list.

"He is a really good running back," O'Leary said of Haynes. "But I am more pleased about the way the offensive line played. If they block like that, he will have good days."

The Mountaineers were equally as devastating in the air against UCF. WVU quarterback Rasheed Marshall was nearly perfect, completing 14-of-18 passes for 225 yards. Marshall threw four touchdown passes and ran another in.

While WVU dominated the passing game, UCF was merely trying to work the kinks out of its own. Last week sophomore quarterback Steven Moffett threw for 177 yards against Wisconsin, but didn't have a chance to improve upon that as he was benched for UCF's home opener. Brandon Sumner started for the Knights and showed considerable amounts of rust right away.

"We had some competition this week in practice and I think that is something you need as a team," O'Leary said. "What I did was open up all of the positions and said 'the guy who practices best will play.' No one has really jumped out and separated themselves. I was happy with some of the things Brandon did and very proud of Kyle. Steve will get an opportunity to win his job again this week in practice."

Sumner finished the day with only nine completions out of 21 passes for only 86 yards. The senior did complete the first UCF touchdown pass of the season, a 14-yarder to senior wideout Tavaris Capers.

True freshman Kyle Israel took the helm in the fourth quarter, completing all four of his passes for 44 yards.

The Knights head to University Park, Pa., Saturday to face Joe Paterno and the Penn State Nittany Lions.

For complete statistics and a game summary, see A11

UCF linebacker Stanford Rhule led the Knights' defense with seven tackles in Saturday's 45-20 loss to No. 11 West Virginia at the Citrus Bowl.

If it's true that a team is only as strong as its weakest link, then the weakest link in UCF women's soccer must be made of titanium.

After amassing an impressive 13 points in the last three games, the Knights' offensive depth is proving to be a dominant and dangerous force.

In a game filled with missed opportunities for the Knights, the UCF men's soccer team lost 2-1 in double overtime Friday night, when Marshall capitalized on one of its rare chances.

Israel's big shot

Endorsements ablaze, I've got my new QB

I don't care if he played against West Virginia's second or third teams.

I don't care if the entire Mountaineers' defense played with one arm tied behind their backs.

Kyle Israel looked good.

I've watched Daunte. I've watched Vic Penn and Ryan Schneider. I'm not saying that he's better than them. That's yet to be seen.

I am saying that UCF has the makings of becoming a quarterback factory, and Israel is the next big product waiting to be released.

I was the guy that might as well have thrown up billboards for Steven Moffett because my hopes were so high for him. I'm not giving up yet, but he has to show me something.

In the meantime, UCF needs to ride Israel and find out what this kid is all about. Saturday it appeared that he's all about heart. I'm no doctor, but the Knights need a huge shot in the arm of heart.

There was no heart on that field for most of the first and second quarter. There were plenty of good efforts, but it took Tavaris Capers' 14-yard touchdown reception in the second quarter before there looked like there was any life in this team.

But after that catch, I really think something happened. I think deep down inside, every UCF player on that field flipped their heart switches. I think that one play made every single player say, "Hey, maybe we can do this."

Heart is a pretty special thing. With heart Troy can beat Missouri and Marshall. With heart FAU can beat Hawaii. With heart a true freshman can be thrown to the wolves and live to tell about it.

I like what is happening with this program. I like the direction that it's heading in. I think if the Knights put some heart back on the field and get their heads into the games, then maybe we can find a way to take the MAC.

I know that I'm probably the biggest UCF homer in the world, but if you look at our roster it's plain as day that we have talent. It's clearer than a Mormon's liver that we have skilled athletes with good size and worlds of potential. And it's pretty obvious that we have heart.

It's just time for our guys to lay it all out there. Stop worrying about some stupid penalty. Stop worrying about giving up a few yards to some flash-in-the-pan running back. Stop worrying about me and a bunch of media monkeys writing a few bad words.

Losing sucks, that's for certain. I swear if my current flavor-of-the-week tells me how bad UCF football is one more time, I'm going to rip my eardrums out.

But losing stops when we put our hearts into something. Hell, 32,224 fans showed heart we haven't seen in more than a year. Even the five fans in section 109 beating the ever-loving life out of one another showed some heart.

Now if we can just get our guys on the field to show that energy and fervor, we'll be back on track. We're still the fourth-best football program in this state. I refuse to believe that FAU and its fossil of a coach are going to pass us and I guarantee that USF is slowly falling off the map.

I think UCF football can turn it on right now. I think Israel is that spark and I think he can do it against Penn State.

Joe Paterno hasn't recruited a good team since Britney Spears was only slightly white trash.

This is Israel's big shot.

Or maybe it'll be just another good effort.

First win remains tough task for slumping volleyball team

UCF falls to 0-6 after losses to Utah Valley State and Memphis

MATT DUNAWAY
Senior Staff Writer

The 2004 edition of UCF volleyball now has something in common they don't want to have with the 1985 squad. Nineteen seasons and three coaches have passed since the last time the program started a season 0-6. Coach Meg Colado has never finished a season less than seven games over .500, and has to look all the way back to her inaugural campaign in 1999 to find the last time she was six games under the .500 mark. The good news for Colado is the '99 team swept through the Atlantic Sun Conference regular season undefeated before falling short in the A-Sun final to Florida Atlantic finishing 19-12. Entering the season, expectations were sky high. The Knights were coming off a 23-7 record, and an appearance in the NCAA second round. But it's clear at this point the UCF offense is missing setter Jenny Frank, who graduated at the end of last season. BYU (4-2) dismantled UCF (0-6) in three games (30-15, 30-12, 30-22) on Saturday night in final leg of the BYU Mizuno Classic. The 12 points in game two equaled the fewest points that UCF has scored in a game since rally scoring was implemented in 2001. For the second game this season, the Knights finished a match with a negative hitting percentage (-.067) tallying 17 kills with 23 errors. The only player to hit for a positive percentage (.308) was middle blocker Jana Mitchell finishing with a team-high five kills while outside hitters Emily Watts and Tanya Jarvis combined to go 3-for-30, committing seven errors. On the other hand, the Cougars offense was firing on all cylinders, racking up a season-high .400 hitting percentage. Middle hitters Lindsay Hartssock and Catherine Palmer gutted the Knight front line, smacking 13 and 10 kills respectively. UCF got off to a hot start against Memphis (6-2) on Saturday afternoon by never trailing in the first game. But the Knights fizzled, out dropping three straight (30-27, 25-30, 27-30, 18-30). The first half looked promising as UCF hit over .300 percent in back-to-back games, but the Tigers went on a 17-8 spurt in the middle of game two building too big a lead. UCF had a 22-21 advantage in game three, but Memphis responded with two quick points never to trail again. The Tigers finished the match on a 23-12 run to finish the match. Setter Katie Kohnen finished with her first double-double of the season, setting up 18 assists and recording 10 digs. Watts and Jarvis led the offense, popping 12 kills each while outside hitter

Kristin Mondientz chipped in with a career-high eight kills. Outside hitter Tiara Gilkey, who received all-tournament honors for Memphis, along with setter Heather Watts finished with double-doubles. Gilkey recorded a game-high 20 kills and 13 digs while Watts posted 54 assists and 10 digs. Despite a season-high .222 team hitting percentage, UCF could not overcome 17 service errors sprayed through the match. The opening day of the tournament saw UCF drop a 3-1 decision to second year Division I-A program Utah Valley State (28-30, 33-31, 17-30, 25-30). Kohnen along with fellow setter Maureen Perez posted double-doubles directing the UCF attack. Perez set a career-high 24 assists and dug out 13 balls in the back row. Watts and Jarvis squashed 13 kills each for the black and gold. Outside hitter Deise Borghetti racked up a double-double to lead UVSC (3-2), powering home a match-high 21 kills and adding 15 digs. The Wolverines also got help from outside hitter Alina Wallauer who broke off 19 kills of her own. For the second-straight weekend, Watts earned all-tournament honors. The Kansas native crushed a team-high 26 kills for the tournament. UCF continues to look for its first win of the season when the Knights host Georgia in the first leg of the UCF Fall Invitational at 7 p.m. Friday night at the UCF Arena.

MAC woes continue to pile up

Marshall gives Ohio State some heat in loss

MATT DUNAWAY & JEFF SHARON
Staff Writers

It was another forgettable weekend for the MAC with only three schools posting wins this weekend. Needless to say, the three wins were not all that impressive, since they were all against I-AA schools. Over the weekend the WAC posted two huge out-of-conference wins, and is replacing the MAC as the top mid-major conference in the nation No. 9 Ohio State 24, Marshall 21 Always one for theatrics, the Buckeyes escaped the upset-minded Thundering Herd on a 55-yard field goal by kicker Mike Nugent as time expired. The kick matched the longest field goal in Ohio Stadium's 82-year history. Over the past two seasons, OSU has won 13 of 14 games when decided by less than a touchdown, dating back to its 2002 national championship season. Marshall had a chance to take the lead late in the fourth quarter, but kicker Ian O'Connor missed a 35-yard attempt. A poor punt by O'Connor with 45 seconds left gave the Buckeyes prime field position at its own 45. OSU quarterback Justin Zwick had another solid performance throwing for 321 yards and three scores while hooking up with his lead receiver Santonio Holmes 10 times for 210 and two scoring strikes. Running backs Ahmad Bradshaw and Earl Charles combined for 149 yards and a touchdown on the ground to lead Marshall. Up next for Marshall: at No. 3 Georgia No. 11 Florida 49, E. Michigan 10 Running back Anthony Sherrill had his consecutive 100-yard games streak snapped at nine as the Gators held the EMU running back to 24 yards on 16 carries. The Eagles had some success moving the ball against the Florida defense, marching 91 yards after the opening kickoff to take a 3-0 lead on Andrew Wellock's 23-yard field goal. But the game shortly went downhill from there. On UF's next two possessions, running back Ciatrick Fason responded with two touchdowns runs, giving the Gators a 14-3 advantage. Fason finished with 105 yards. Even though kick-off was moved up five hours, lightning still delayed the game for 64 minutes midway through the second quarter with Florida leading 14-3. Less than three minutes after play resumed, the Gators struck again. This time it was running back DeShawn Wynn pounding away on a 2-yard run making it 21-3.

EMU posted its only touchdown when quarterback Matt Bohnet hooked up with receiver Eric Deslauriers. Quarterback Chris Leak got into the act, picking apart the EMU secondary in the second half. He finished the game with 244 yards and three touchdowns. Up next for EMU: vs. Toledo Kansas 63, Toledo 14 Toledo's defensive problems continued as it gave up 63 points for the second time in as many weeks. Quarterback Adam Barmann went 20-for-24 for 249 yards and four scores in the first half alone as the Jayhawks rocked and chalked their way to a 49-7 half-time advantage. Running back John Randle also chipped in, carrying the ball 19 times for 104 yards and two scores, and catching three passes for another 79 yards, including a 55-yard scamper. As a team, Kansas racked up 501 yards of total offense. The Rockets were never in the game, as they trailed 42-0 just 18:03 into the game. Quarterback Bruce Gradkowski had a day to forget, going 15-for-28 for 215 yards with two picks and two lost fumbles. Up next for Toledo: at Eastern Michigan Cincinnati 45, Miami of Ohio 26 The Bearcats gained 599 total yards of offense as they PLEASE SEE REDHAWKS on A10 formed.

Snaman pulls in second shutout

"We're so dangerous," Cromwell said. "The teams can't key in on one person because so many people are scoring."

In their victory against a young Tulane team, the Knights received goals from all three of their forwards, Jen Montgomery, Becca Eshelman and Kendra Flock, and two of their mid-fielders, Shannon Wing and Ali Blagriff. In front of the home crowd, Julie Snaman and Beth Harless spilt time at the net, with the Green Wave's lone goal occurring when the ball was deflected off a UCF player.

During the game the Knights played cohesively with immense chemistry. The fatigue and mental challenges that plagued the team early on seem to be a thing of the past.

"It's definitely improved. It had to improve," Cromwell said of the team's on-field communication. "It's improved from practice yesterday to the game tonight so that's definitely helped." Cromwell also stated that her midfielders spent some time studying tape, and that they've responded really well and improved in some tactical areas.

Earlier in the week UCF defeated in-state rival USF 5-0 at home. In that game the offensive depth was again destructive, with goals coming from starters Montgomery and Eshelman, a penalty kick from junior Courtney Baines, and Rachel Whiteaker and Rachel

BRETT HART / CENTRAL FLORIDA FUTURE
Freshman Rachel Whiteaker scored her first goal as a Knight on her first shot as a Knight Wednesday against South Florida.

Overstreet who scored off the bench. Recording the shutout was keeper Julie Snaman with four saves.

Last weekend, while the UCF campus felt the wrath of Hurricane Frances, the Golden Knights showed the teams at the Nike Classic in Birmingham, Ala., that they too were a force to be reckoned with. The Knights went 1-0-1 in the tournament and took the crown from host team UAB, the winner of the previous three years.

In the first game of the tournament, UCF tied a strong UAB host team 1-1. Flock scored her first collegiate goal as UCF out-shot the Blazers 17-15. Snaman fared well in the goal, recording eight saves.

Later in the tournament, the Golden Knights overwhelmed Minnesota 3-0 to take the title. Redshirt freshman Lauren McDevitt knocked in two goals with assists coming from Monique Fireall and Baines. Flock also scored her second goal of the tournament off a pass from Eshelman. Snaman recorded one save and the shutout.

The tournament crown wasn't the Knights' only accolade, as freshman forward Kendra Flock was named the tournament MVP. Teammate and fellow forward Jen Montgomery was named to the All-Tournament Team along with freshman Jessica Hallgren and the superb defender senior Joanna Black.

So far the UCF women's soccer team has proved that its depth makes it a dangerous contender. Now the girls and Coach Cromwell are just enjoying playing the game.

"It's fun to watch," Cromwell said. "I let them out on the field and they're ready. They're prepared."

At the time of print, the Knights were preparing to take on Air Force this Sunday in the final game of the UCF Fall Classic. The Knights expect to improve their 4-1-1 record against the Falcons, who are 3-2 on the season and finished seventh in the Mountain West Conference in 2003.

Costly calls gives game to Herd

period of physical soccer, the Thundering Herd gained a one-man advantage in double overtime after the ejection of John Sobczak, who got his second yellow card on a delayed call in the 103rd minute.

UCF Coach Bob Winch referred to the call as questionable.

Said Winch: "It was a big question the whole game with [the referee]."

Some of the calls by the referee seemed to upset both benches on more than one occasion.

The Knights had been controlling play in both overtimes, but the ruling seemed to swing the momentum to Marshall, which scored the game-winner just over three minutes later.

"It sparked Marshall," Winch said. "And to their credit they came after us."

It was Marshall's fifth shot of the night and only its third shot on goal, compared to 20 shots by the Knights with 11 of them being on goal.

"We had our opportunities," Winch said. "When you get in an overtime situation, you look back on the opportunities you had. Our thoughts are that we shouldn't have even been in overtime."

The Knights out-shot the Thundering Herd 16 to 3 in regulation and 3 to 1 in the first overtime.

Both teams seemed a little sluggish at the beginning of the game. The Knights were a bit careless with the ball in the mid-field. As the first half continued, UCF started to control the game through the midfield, sparked by solid play from sophomore Rafael Teixeira. Coach Winch was impressed by Teixeira, saying he played well.

Despite the Knights' solid ball control, Marshall was able to strike first in the 28th minute. Herd junior Kirk Gibson took a pass from midfielder Mike Bourassa inside the 18 and put a weak shot on goal. McIntosh was screened and never saw the shot as it rolled in to his right.

UCF continued to control the game even after the Marshall goal. The Knights were able to even the score in the 40th minute. Forward Jon Imran, last year's leading scorer, took a long pass from Teixeira at about the 18-yard mark, faked the goalie and scored on a high shot.

In the second half, the Knights seemed to have complete control as they out-shot Marshall 9-to-1 and had a 6-to-1 advantage on corner kicks. However, they were unable to capitalize on any of these opportunities, as Marshall goaltenders combined to make 10 saves in the game — six of them coming in the second half.

The Knights had a scoring chance in the first overtime from Billy Judino, who scored the only two goals in the Knights' first two games. Judino had a clear shot at the net from inside the 18-yard mark but failed to put it on net as he missed to the right.

Moments later the Knights avoided a close call after an aggressive save by Ryan McIntosh. McIntosh charged and collided with a shooting Marshall player about 15 yards from the goal. The ball skipped to the left and bounced off the post, and the Knights' defense cleared it.

The loss drops the Knights' record to 0-2-1 and improves Marshall to 1-2.

held Miami of Ohio's rushing attack to just 37 yards on 24 carries.

Quarterback Gino Guidugli went 12-for-23 for 258 yards and one touchdown with one interception, and he added a rushing touchdown. Wide receiver Hannibal Thomas caught five balls for 175 yards, including a 69-yard touchdown reception.

The turning point came when the Redhawks closed to within a point at 14-13 in the second, but a blocked extra point foreshadowed 18 unanswered points by the Bearcats to put them up 32-13 at the half.

Quarterback Josh Betts had a phenomenal day in a losing cause, completing 26 of his 43 passes for 416 yards and four touchdowns. Despite gaining 499 total yards of offense, Miami fell to 1-2 on the year.

Up next for Miami: vs. Ohio

Southern Illinois' failed 2-point conversion attempt with 54 seconds remaining ended a furious fourth-quarter rally, giving an underhanded Northern Illinois team its first victory of the season over the No. 1 team in Division I-AA.

SIU quarterback Joel Sambursky led the comeback charge. With 9:03 left in the fourth, he hit receiver Kellen Allen on a 9-yard touchdown pass to trim the margin to 23-16.

Sambursky proceeded to find receiver Brent Little to cap off a 78-yard drive with only 54 seconds left. However, Sambursky failed to hit tight end Chris Kupec for the go-ahead 2-point conversion.

Husky backup quarterback Phil Horvath filled in for Josh Haldi for the second straight game. Horvath was without starting receivers Sam Hurd and Shatone Powers who were both serving suspensions.

NIU got 144 yards on 24 carries from tailback A.J. Harris, and 61-yard touchdown pass from receiver Marcus Perez to fellow receiver Dan Sheldon.

Up next for NIU: at Iowa State

In other action, Syracuse used a 24-point second quarter to run past Buffalo 37-17, while Pittsburgh's defense and special teams carried the Panthers to a 24-3 win over Ohio.

Akron dropped to 0-2 as Middle Tennessee State held on for a 31-24 victory at the Rubber Bowl.

Running back Eugene Gross only ran 12 times for 37 yards, but posted three touchdowns on the day.

Kent State welcomed quarterback Joshua Cribbs back into the fold after serving a one-game suspension. Cribbs ran for 105 yards and a touchdown and passed for two more scores as the Golden Flashes raced past Liberty 38-10.

Michigan State rebounded from an embarrassing loss last week at Rutgers, sprinting past Central Michigan 24-7 in its home opener. CMU running back Jerry Seymour ran for 164 yards, including a 90-yard touchdown for the Chippewas lone score.

For the third time in four seasons Western Michigan could not solve the Virginia Tech defense, getting blasted in Blacksburg 63-0.

Bowling Green rolled over Southeast Missouri State 49-10, scoring all of its points in the first half.

No. 25 Purdue whipped Ball State 59-7 as quarterback Kyle Orton completed his first 15 passes on his way to 329 yards and a career-high five touchdown passes in just over two quarters of work.

GAME 2 » UCF: 20 • WVU: 45

LEADERS: Passing: Brandon Sumner, 9-21, 86 yards, 1 TD • Rushing: Alex Haynes, 34 carries, 137 yards, 1 TD • Receiving: Brandon Marshall, 4 receptions, 48 yards

UCF OFFENSE PLAYER OF THE GAME

ALEX HAYNES

UCF's senior leader had one of the best games of his career, carrying the ball 34 times for 137 yards and scoring one touchdown. Haynes bruised and battered a West Virginia defense that had given up just 59 rushing yards in their first game against East Carolina. He also caught two passes for 16 yards. Haynes' highlight was UCF's first possession of the second half, when he carried the ball twice, once for 18 yards and again for 21, scoring his first touchdown of the season.

UCF DEFENSE PLAYER OF THE GAME

TRAVONTI JOHNSON

Johnson recorded a team-high seven tackles, all of them solo, and he recovered a fumble. However, he got burned on several occasions, and the secondary was plagued by bad tackling as a whole.

WEST VIRGINIA OFFENSE PLAYER OF THE GAME

RASHEED MARSHALL

Marshall followed up a 6-for-15 performance in his first game by completing 14 of his 18 passes for 265 yards and a career-high-tying four scores, rushing nine times for 65 yards and another touchdown. The senior quarterback engineered a devastating offensive attack that set the tone in the first period, scoring 14 points and gaining 168 yards, and that included an opening drive that was stopped by a Jason Colson fumble deep in UCF territory. For the season, Marshall is now 20/33 with 408 yards and five touchdown passes.

WEST VIRGINIA DEFENSE PLAYER OF THE GAME

ADAM LEONHORTT

Leonhortt was all over the field for West Virginia, recording seven tackles, five of them by himself. He was the quarterback of a defense that surrendered just 299 total yards. Although the Mountaineers did not force a turnover, they did hold UCF enough to give their power offense fantastic field position all day long.

SUMMING UP THE GAME

Senior tailback Alex Haynes led Saturday's game in rushing with 137 yards. Haynes needs 437 more to break the UCF record.

JEFF SHARON
Staff Writer

After getting blasted by Wisconsin, UCF stepped up to a greater challenge at home against the tenth-ranked West Virginia Mountaineers. Although the Knights suffered a 45-20 setback, there were a few bright spots that Coach George O'Leary could take away from his team's effort.

In many ways, the game was closer than the score indicated. Here's the breakdown.

West Virginia won because . . .

It was the superior team, plain and simple. The Mountaineers moved the ball at will in the first half, scoring 28 points, not including having their first drive in the red zone stopped by a turnover. The Mountaineers gained 460 yards of total offense on 63 plays, and scored 14 points in each of the first three quarters. They were also well-balanced on offense, gaining 225 total passing yards, and 235 total rush yards. The defense also held UCF's total yardage under 300.

UCF lost because . . .

It could not capitalize on momentum. West Virginia turned the ball over twice, but the Knights, who did not turn the ball over themselves, got just 7 points off of those turnovers. They also forced West Virginia to punt just twice, and both of those were in the fourth quarter, when the game was well in hand. The Knights also had a 3:40 advantage in time of possession, but could not move the ball enough to keep the game close.

Turning point

Following a 21-yard touchdown run by Alex Haynes that brought the Knights within 11 points at 28-17 early in the third, UCF stole the momentum from WVU and needed a stop on defense. But Matt Prater's kickoff to the Mountaineers sailed out of bounds, giving the Mountaineers possession at their own 35. Three plays later, Brandon Myles grabbed a Marshall screen pass and ran 57 yards to pay dirt, extending the West Virginia lead to 35-17, and ending all hopes of a UCF rally.

Drive of the game

WVU's 10-play, 80-yard march in the second quarter

Leading 21-7, West Virginia showed why they are a national powerhouse, showing the ball down UCF's throat on a drive that took 5:37. Key to this drive were two costly penalties on UCF, including a personal foul on linebacker Josh Stephens that gave WVU a first down at midfield.

Running back Brian Wright chipped in with 19 yards on just two carries, and Rasheed Marshall completed both of his pass attempts. Running back Jason Colson, who carried the ball six times on the drive for 19 of his 108 rush yards on this drive, capped it with a one-yard scoring run that put the Mountaineers up 28-7 late in the second quarter.

Play of the game

Rasheed Marshall's 57-yard touchdown pass to Brandon Myles

UCF had the momentum, down 11 early in the third, and had West Virginia in a third-and-two at its own 43. Marshall dropped back and threw a bubble screen to Myles, but a rushing UCF defender deflected the pass. Myles, in a fantastic display of field awareness and athleticism, came back to the ball, snagged it off his shoe tops, weaved his way through the UCF defense and into the open field. Fifty-seven yards later, West Virginia was back up by three scores, quashing any momentum the Knights had in the second half.

Blunder of the game

Matt Prater's kickoff out-of-bounds following Haynes' touchdown run

After Alex Haynes showed why he is one of the top backs in the country by ramming the ball into the end zone on just two plays, UCF had the crowd back in the game, down just two scores. But Prater, usually very reliable on kickoffs, shanked the ball out-of-bounds on the right sideline, giving the Mountaineers great field position at their own 35. Three plays later, WVU scored on the Marshall-to-Myles screen pass that blew the game wide open.

Cherry on top

Brad Cooper's 54-yard field goal in the fourth quarter

With WVU already up by 22, and with great field position again after a 47-yard punt return by Adam "Pacman" Jones, Cooper stepped onto the field to attempt a career-long 54-yarder, ostensibly to test his distance. The ball looked as though it didn't have the distance, but it bounced off the crossbar and over, giving the Mountaineers a 45-20 lead, and Cooper a career-long kick. When it's your night, it's your night.

West Virginia special teams player of the game

"Pacman" Jones, punt returner

Jones returned two kickoffs for 35 yards and two punts for 75 yards. The first punt return, a 28-yarder, gave West Virginia the ball for the first time in the game at the UCF 23 yard line, but WVU fumbled the ball away five plays later. The second, a 47-yarder in the fourth, resulted in Cooper's 45-yard field goal that concluded the scoring.

UCF special teams player of the game

Aaron Horne, punter

Horne took the reins as the full-time punter for the first time on Saturday, booting six punts for an average of 38.2 yards per kick, and pinning West Virginia inside their own 20 once.

Stat of the game

Passing yards
West Virginia — 225
UCF — 130

After hearing all week about Kay-Jay Harris and his 337 yards rushing against ECU, we saw him forced to leave with a hamstring injury. Instead it was quarterback Rasheed Marshall who lit up UCF with four touchdown passes.

Line of the game

Rasheed Marshall, quarterback, WVU
14-for-18, 225 yards, 4 touchdown passes
9 carries, 65 yards, 1 touchdown rush

Pleasant surprise

Kyle Israel, quarterback, UCF

Israel relieved starter Brandon Sumner with 11:18 left in the game after Sumner went 9-for-21 for 86 yards and a touchdown. Israel marched UCF down the field 65 yards on 12 plays in 5:38, completing all four of his pass attempts for 44 yards and scrambling for another 16. Although the drive ended when Israel was sacked on a fourth-and-goal at the 4-yard line, the true freshman moved the ball as effectively as UCF had all day. His performance should make things interesting as UCF prepares for Penn State next week.

OUR STANCE

Free information access belongs to all

Florida's public access laws guarantee every student at UCF the right to look at all public records — documents, letters (including e-mail and resignations), maps, books, tapes, photos, films, audio tapes, software or other material — made or received in connection with an official State of Florida transaction.

Because the UCF Board of Trustees is a state-created entity designed to set public policy for the university, students can ask for the budget and recorded minutes for the meeting.

Because the SGA Senate distributes student funds to clubs, organizations and departments that oversee student activities, any student can ask for the recorded tapes of any meeting.

Because professors are paid partly out of the government's pocket, students are allowed to see the salaries and educational and job history of any professor.

Because UCF police are part of the university, students have the right to request police reports. Ongoing investigations are often excluded from the public records laws, though any concluded arrest should include the time, date, location and nature of the crime and the name, sex, age and address of both the victim and the person arrested except in cases such as sexual battery and child abuse.

Students should request this information and learn from it. As Schoolhouse Rock taught, knowledge is power.

Looking at the budget for the university can help money-savvy students figure out how much our university spends on computer equipment and help them get better deals.

Listening to Student Government Association tapes could help Senate hopefuls discover the power relationships in Senate and which senators band together.

Club members could easily learn exactly what appeals garner the most amount of money from the Activity and Service Fee budget.

Knowing the job history of a professor could be useful to understanding the real-life experience a professor has in the subject that he or she teaches.

Police reports could alert students to the most dangerous parts of campus and the times when students are most likely to get pulled over on campus.

Finding the correct person to ask for the information can be a problem, though UCF's News and Information Office can point students in the right direction. Call 407-823-2502 to get information on the right people to talk to.

Students should also know their rights when it comes to finding and using public information. First of all, the official giving the information should not ask a citizen to produce identification, to give their name or the reason for the information. Students are allowed to both look at a particular record and make copies of them, though charges may apply; up to $1 per copy of a document may be charged. If an official refused to release a record, the official has to give a written statement on why the record was exempt from the public records law. The request must be responded to in a timely manner — 30 days.

Students are not secondary citizens, and they have a right to know what's going on in their community, and especially their school. Requesting public records and learning the laws surrounding them trains young adults to become conscientious, knowledgeable citizens. For more information on the Freedom of Information Act and Florida's statutes pertaining thereof, go to <http://foi.missouri.edu/citelist.html>.

OUR STANCE

Ads, not platforms, will decide election

Political advertisements are notorious for defamation of character and mudslinging anything and everything that could possibly hurt the other candidate's chances. This November's election is certainly no different, but the results of this bashing might not be the ones the parties hope for.

Attacks against Sen. John Kerry's service in Vietnam have been a hot topic. The GOP's swiftboat ads are certainly taking their toll against Kerry as voters may now think that he might not be the war hero he claims. The slight success of these ads might be just that — slight. There is a possibility that these ads could ricochet and hurt President Bush. The halfway intelligent voter will contrast and compare both candidates' war duties to make a decision.

Recent documents regarding Bush's military service in the Texas Air National Guard and possible preferential treatment have surfaced and become Democratic chum. Although the legitimacy of these documents is being debated, the fact remains that the GOP's decision to attack Kerry's military service is in fact a double-edged sword.

The newer GOP ads depict Kerry as a political flip-flopper and weak decision-maker. These ads focus on his stances on Medicare, Iraq and the war on terror in particular. One Bush-supported ad says, "The same John Kerry who was absent for 36 of 38 Medicare votes last year

... even one giving seniors prescription drug coverage ... John Kerry ... he actually voted for higher Medicare premiums ... before he came out against them."

While it is supported by fact that Kerry did indeed miss those votes, it doesn't say how many others missed that vote as well. It doesn't even mention Bush's stance on the issue, it only attacks Kerry. The countereffect of that ad will be the argument that Bush took an unprecedented amount of vacation days.

The GOP seems to plan to ride out the Kerry "flip-flopper" tag all the way to November. Bush's official Web site, <http://www.georgewbush.com>, is jam-packed with facts about Kerry changing his stances. It even includes a free online game called "Flip Flop Olympics" where you try to remember what issues Kerry voted for and against, all while Hillary Clinton, Ted Kennedy and Howard Dean give you points for the more uneven your answers are.

All this smashing on Kerry's flip-flopping would make you think that President Bush has never done so. Not the case at all. In 2000, Bush argued against new military engagements and "nation building." He's done both in Iraq and Afghanistan. Bush also opposed a Homeland Security Department, then fully embraced it. The key rebuttal against these statements is of course that things changed after Sept. 11. Bush opposed the creation of an independent Sept. 11 commission, and then supported it. In an interview last month on NBC's Today show, he was quoted as saying he doubted the war on terror could be won. He quickly changed his words on the campaign trail to say that the war could and would be won.

It is more than obvious that both candidates have difficulty sticking on issues, but why then would they decide to slam each other about flip-flopping? Will whoever makes the more persuasive ads win?

It would make sense to leave those topics alone and let records on key issues speak for themselves, but this of course is not American politics. Each party understands that most people do not vote for the best candidate, but instead for the lesser evil of the two. Television ads and radio spots from both parties continually feed half-truths and biased garbage about candidates to anyone who is willing to listen. While this method might prove to win this election, it will eventually be the demise of the two-party system. A public unhappy with both candidates could uproot the system and change politics for the better. Maybe even demand a ballot with more than two choices. But that day seems far away.

Deceptive ads will continue to be effective because the American public will continue to read the headlines and not what's between them.

BEN HENDERSON / CENTRAL FLORIDA FUTURE

Send troops as a last resort

If you believe President Bush's GOP acceptance speech, it is now the duty of America to liberate the Middle East in a new century of freedom. It is clear the president will use the U.S. military to march his crusade wherever and whenever he wants.

We know Iraq, Iran and North Korea have been identified as the axis of evil — one down and two to go. You are right, Mr. President, we know exactly where you stand — and it does not make us feel safer.

As a veteran, I urge students and faculty to elect a commander-in-chief who puts our sons and daughters in harm's way only as a last resort, not as part of some global crusade.

— MAJ. ROBERT TORMEY
U.S. AIR FORCE, RETIRED

Big mistake on campus

As an alumna of UCF, I'm always putting in a good word for the university and highly recommend it to anyone who asks. Advertising is the best way to improve UCF's growing status in the university system, which is a vested interest of mine as a recent graduate of the school.

After reading of the school's plan to participate in Big Man on Campus, I was completely disgusted and disappointed. These shows are sophomoric and specifically edited to portray the people involved as juvenile, shallow and over-sexed.

I am none of these things, nor are the vast majority of students at UCF. To see my university so perverted and misrepresented is a severe disappointment to me. The university could be better served by advertising our academic standards and school-related programs, not by cantering about on TV acting like total trash. Shame on UCF officials for allowing this to happen!

—STEPHANIE ZAUSMER

Activate your political conscience

As the number of U.S. soldiers who have died in the conflict in Iraq surpasses 1,000, those who have died lose yet more of their identity to abstraction, another layer of the detail that made them who they were is abandoned.

The guy whose garage band couldn't play in tune, the girl who was trying to get into college, all these multifaceted lives muted by the round, poetic number 1,000. Their motives, their fears, their consent or lack thereof were muted by the deafening justifications made by the administration.

There is so much latent distrust of this war in those around me, an inherent sense that something is amiss. Yet the numbers of those willing to publicly proclaim this sentiment, in the form of either protest or vigil, is disproportionately small. Americans have been trained to look at protesters as caricatures, and many view political action as a futile gesture.

The belief that one must take the first step in order to set off any political movement is impetuous enough for some, but wilts in the face of the inescapable sentiment of hopelessness and futility that grips so many that I have spoken to. I don't ask those of you who feel this way to adopt some higher ideal, to grasp for that justification.

But I feel that, if not for any other reason, you should become active in some way in order to appease your own conscience. What is necessary is not the belief in imminent success, because that is never an assurance.

What is necessary is conscience, the knowledge that, years from now, whether or not the occupation has ended, whether or not a new unjust war has begun, you can say to yourself that you did what you could, instead of wondering if you may share some blame.

—JARED RICE
